

From The Desk of Mark Blane

I Always Get Asked, "How Long Will My Personal Injury Case Take?"

My answer: It all depends on the types of injuries you sustained, and how long your body will need to heal. Other factors apply as well such as what type of injury producing event caused your injuries? Was it a car collision, bicycle crash, slip and fall, dog bite, or pedestrian injury? The bio-mechanics of each of those injury producing events are different.

The way the bio-mechanical forces to cause injury that were applied to your body also affect how you were injured, and how long it will take for your body to heal. For example, falling 16 feet to concrete from a defective ladder will injure you much more differently than if you were injured in a rear-end collision where the other vehicle was traveling at 30 mph.

The 5 Big Benefits of Having Medical Pay on Your Car Insurance

Medical Pay in California is available under your automobile insurance in California as a "voluntary add-on." This means it is not required by California law, but rather Sometimes your private health plan does not pay for everything, or you have co-pays that are owed. Yes, you will get a settlement at some future point, but sometimes your medical bills need payment right away.
